BACKGROUND

Introduction

“The creation of a national monument is of no small consequence.”<sup>1</sup> When President Jimmy Carter withdrew 56 million acres in Alaska to be national monuments in 1978,<sup>2</sup> Alaskans protested and broke “over 25 Park Service rules in a two-day period.”<sup>3</sup> Utahns protested when President Clinton withdrew the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument. The signing ceremony took place at the South Rim of the Grand Canyon, Arizona “[t]o avoid protests that would mar a photo opportunity.”<sup>4</sup> “[S]olemn and angry,” Kanab, Utah residents wore black arm bands, released 50 black balloons, and bore signs saying, “Shame on you Clinton.”<sup>5</sup> Northeast-based commercial fishing associations sued federal officials for “injury from the restrictions on commercial fishing” imposed by the Northeast Canyons and Seamounts Marine National Monument.<sup>6</sup> That monument is “an area roughly the size of Connecticut that sits 130 miles off the coast of Cape Cod.”<sup>7</sup> In 2020, the University of Hawaii and the Pacific Islands Fisheries Science Center published their results of the economic impact of Papahānaumokuākea Marine National Monument.<sup>8</sup> President Bush proclaimed the monument, 139,793 square miles, in 2006<sup>9</sup> and President Obama expanded it to 442,781 square miles in 2016,<sup>10</sup> resulting in millions of dollars of lost fishing revenue in the first sixteen months after the expansion.<sup>11</sup>

“The President’s unique status under the Constitution distinguishes him from other executive officials,”<sup>12</sup> causing him to have “unreviewable Presidential discretion.”<sup>13</sup> Chief Justice Roberts recognized “[t]he broad authority that the Antiquities Act vests in the President stands in marked contrast to other, more restrictive means” used to “preserve portions of land and sea.”<sup>14</sup> He also pointed out that the Antiquities Act “has been transformed into a power without any discernible limit to set aside vast and amorphous expanses of terrain above and below the sea.”<sup>15</sup>

“How the President chooses to exercise the discretion Congress has granted him is not a matter for [a court’s] review.”<sup>16</sup> Instead, according to the 9th Circuit, “[w]hen Congress has wished to restrict the President’s Antiquities Act authority, it has done so expressly.”<sup>17</sup> Twice, Congress has responded when a president has withdrawn land as a national monument. President Franklin D. Roosevelt proclaimed the Jackson Hole National Monument, 221,610 acres,<sup>18</sup> on March 15, 1943.<sup>19</sup> In 1950, Congress aggressively responded, amending the Antiquities Act itself to prohibit “further extension or establishment of national monuments in Wyoming...except by express authorization of Congress.”<sup>20</sup> And later, in response to President Carter’s 1978 Alaska proclamations, Congress passed a law that prohibited “future executive branch action which withdraws more than five thousand acres, in the aggregate, of public lands within the State of Alaska.”<sup>21</sup> Congress knows how to restrict statutory presidential power. Otherwise, the terms of the statute control.

Procedural History

This action stems from two cases:

natural and historic objects, and wild life in such manner and by such means as will leave them unimpaired for the enjoyment of future generations.”<sup>52</sup>

The process for a President to establish or enlarge a national monument under the Antiquities Act is two-fold. “The President may, in the President’s discretion, declare by public proclamation historic landmarks, historic and prehistoric structures, and other objects of historic or scientific interest that are situated on land owned or controlled by the Federal Government to be national monuments.”<sup>53</sup> Then the President “may reserve[s] parcels of land as a part of the national monuments.”<sup>54</sup> These parcels “shall be confined to the smallest area compatible with the proper care and management of the objects to be protected.”<sup>55</sup>

Since 1920, there have been several challenges to a president’s authority to withdraw land as a national monument under the Antiquities Act. These include challenges to the Grand Canyon,<sup>56</sup> Jackson Hole,<sup>57</sup> Devil’s Hole,<sup>58</sup> Grand Sequoia,<sup>59</sup> Grand Canyon-Parashant, Canyons of the Ancients, Cascade-Siskiyou, Hanford Reach, Ironwood Forest, Sonoran Desert,<sup>60</sup> Grand Staircase-Escalante,<sup>61</sup> and Northeast Canyons and Seamounts Marine<sup>62</sup> national monuments. Each of these challenges has been unsuccessful.

The Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monuments

The Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument (“GSENM”) was established on September 18, 1996 by President Clinton with Proclamation 6920.<sup>63</sup> It then “consist[ed] of approximately 1.7 million acres.”<sup>64</sup> President Trump reduced the monument to 1,003,863 acres on December 4, 2017.<sup>65</sup> President Biden enlarged the monument to 1.87 million acres on October 8, 2021.<sup>66</sup>

STANDARD OF REVIEW

Defendants bring their Motion to Dismiss under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12.<sup>71</sup> “[T]o withstand a motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain enough allegations of fact ‘to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.’”<sup>72</sup> Dismissal is appropriate under Rule 12(b)(6) when the complaint, standing alone, is legally insufficient to state a claim on which relief may be granted.<sup>73</sup> Each cause of action must be supported by enough sufficient, well-pleaded facts to be plausible on its face.<sup>74</sup> In reviewing a complaint on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, factual allegations are accepted as true and reasonable inferences are drawn in a light most favorable to the plaintiff.<sup>75</sup> However, “assertions devoid of factual allegations” that are nothing more than “conclusory,” and “formulaic recitation” of the law are disregarded.<sup>76</sup>

DISCUSSION

“Whenever a statute gives a discretionary power to any person, to be exercised by him upon his own opinion of certain facts, it is a sound rule of construction, that the statute constitutes him the sole and exclusive judge of the existence of those facts.”<sup>77</sup>

This rule bars Plaintiffs’ claims. Plaintiffs allege President Biden exceeded his authority by enlarging the GSENM and BENM via the Proclamations. Before deciding if the Proclamations are unlawful, the court must decide if they can be reviewed by a court. They cannot. Judicial review requires a waiver of sovereign immunity, which is not present.

Plaintiffs also allege that the Memoranda written by the Bureau of Land Management (“the BLM”) constitute “final agency action” according to the Administrative Procedures Act. They do not. And Plaintiffs do not have standing to allege a denial of a permit because they were not harmed.

Judicial review of these two Proclamations is not permitted without a waiver of sovereign immunity

Plaintiffs allege that President Biden’s Proclamations are reviewable by a federal district court.<sup>78</sup> “The United States, as sovereign, is immune from suit save as it consents to be sued.”<sup>79</sup> “The government consents to be sued only when Congress unequivocally expresses its intention to waive the government’s sovereign immunity in the statutory text.”<sup>80</sup> Without a statutory waiver by Congress, judicial review of a president’s actions is only permitted for constitutional challenges<sup>81</sup> and ultra vires challenges.<sup>82</sup> Without either of those bases, “[judicial] review is not available when the statute in question commits the decision to the discretion of the President.”<sup>83</sup>

Plaintiffs’ claims are statutory challenges, not constitutional challenges

Plaintiffs allege that President Biden violated the Act by enlarging the BENM and GSENM with the Proclamations. These are statutory—not constitutional—claims, similar to those in Dalton v. Specter.<sup>84</sup> In that case, the President had recently received the authority to close a Philadelphia naval shipyard “pursuant to the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Act Court held that the claims were statutory because the President was “said to have violated the terms of the 1990 Act by accepting procedurally flawed recommendations.”<sup>96</sup> The claims in this case are also statutory. President Biden is accused of violating the Antiquities Act with his Proclamations that enlarge GSENM and BENM. The claims target the President’s actions under the statute. Therefore, they are statutory claims, and judicial review is unavailable.

A “President’s actions may...be reviewed for constitutionality.”<sup>97</sup> Plaintiffs did not make any constitutional challenges in their amended complaints.<sup>98</sup>

§702 of the APA does not waive sovereign immunity

Rather than making constitutional challenges, Plaintiffs argue that § 702 of the APA waives the Federal Government’s sovereign immunity.<sup>99</sup> § 702 of the APA states “[a] person suffering legal wrong because of agency action, or adversely affected or aggrieved by agency action within the meaning of a relevant statute, is entitled to judicial review thereof.”

Individual Plaintiffs assert “[s]ection 702 has been read to operate as a ‘general waiver’ of federal sovereign immunity for all injunctive or declaratory relief.”<sup>100</sup> Individual Plaintiffs assert that the Proclamations “necessarily must be implemented by executive branch subordinates” and therefore “claims concerning such proclamations are inherently premised on stopping unlawful subordinate executive action.”<sup>101</sup>

Their argument stems from Brnovich v. Biden, a District of Arizona case involving vaccination requirements relating to federal contractors and subcontractors (“the Contractor Mandate.”)<sup>102</sup> The district court explained that the mandate “involve[d] a substantial number of officials and entities within the executive apparatus that are unquestionably subject to this Court’s equitable jurisdiction.”<sup>103</sup> And that court concluded that “Plaintiffs’ claims implicat[ing] presidential action” “[did] not preclude judicial review”<sup>104</sup> of the actions of the subordinate officials and entities.

Brnovich v. Biden does not apply to this case. Individual Plaintiffs’ amended complaint identifies only the President—and not any other Defendant—as the lone official connected to the Proclamations. The complaint’s claims include: “President Biden’s proclamations”<sup>105</sup>; “President Biden’s reservation of land”<sup>106</sup>; “the President lacks the power to declare a reservation that covers the affected area”<sup>107</sup>; “the President’s discretion”<sup>108</sup>; “the [Antiquities] Act gives the President the limited power”<sup>109</sup>; “every President’s proclamations must comply with the [Antiquities] Act”<sup>110</sup>; and “the President has exceeded his authority.”<sup>111</sup> As Individual Plaintiffs’ amended complaint points out, there are no intermediary officials involved in the issuance of the Proclamations. Their arguments attempt to sidestep the reality that the President is the one

Utah Plaintiffs do not fare any better. They allege “the APA waives sovereign immunity for all non-damages actions against the federal government.”<sup>113</sup> They reference a Tenth Circuit case, Simmat v. U.S. Bureau of Prisons.<sup>114</sup> But this case actually said, “Congress passed legislation in 1976 to waive sovereign immunity in most suits for nonmonetary relief.”<sup>115</sup> Utah Plaintiffs fail to acknowledge the Franklin v. Massachusetts ruling by the Supreme Court in 1992, which distinguished the APA term “agency” from “the President.” The Supreme Court held that “[t]he President is not an agency within the meaning of the [APA].”<sup>116</sup> “As the APA does not expressly allow review of the President’s actions,” “his actions are not subject to its requirements” nor “reviewable for abuse of discretion under the APA.”<sup>117</sup> Therefore, Utah Plaintiffs’ argument fails.

President Biden’s actions are not within the ultra vires exception to sovereign immunity

Plaintiffs allege that the Proclamations are ultra vires President Biden’s authority.<sup>118</sup> An exception to the sovereign immunity doctrine is “suits for specific relief” when an “officer is not doing the business which the sovereign has empowered him to do” and “[h]is actions are ultra vires his authority.”<sup>119</sup> This exception is narrow, available “only because of the officer’s lack of delegated power.”<sup>120</sup> Merely an “error in the exercise of that power is therefore not sufficient”<sup>121</sup> to satisfy the exception. Invoking ultra vires is an “attempt to avoid the shield of sovereign immunity.”<sup>122</sup>

Plaintiffs’ amended complaint does not assert that President Biden lacks the authority to withdraw federal land as national monuments.

Individual Plaintiffs declare in their opposition that “the President went beyond the bounds of his authority to wield a power he does not possess and declare as ‘objects’ things the Antiquities Act categorically does not reach.”<sup>123</sup> And their opposition argues that “this suit rests on the President’s lack of authority to fashion these monuments.”<sup>124</sup> However, Individual Plaintiffs do not cite to any claims from their amended complaint to support these allegations. Even if Individual Plaintiffs were granted leave to amend their complaint, they would not be able to plead the ultra vires exception. “No court of appeals has addressed...how to interpret the [Act’s] ‘smallest area compatible’ requirement.” At most, Individual Plaintiffs would be able to make the same arguments Utah Plaintiffs make, infra. But without additional guidance from Congress or a higher court, the President’s actions are not ultra vires.

Utah Plaintiffs declare in their opposition that they “allege over and over (in their amended complaint) that the President had no power to make the reservations because they ‘exceed [the] limitations] of the Antiquities Act.”<sup>125</sup> They cite to paragraphs 288-318 of their amended complaint for support. But those factual statements are allegations that President Biden misused his authority, not that he lacked it. They claim he exceeded the limitations of the Act<sup>126</sup> by declaring things as monuments “that are not qualifying landmarks, structures, or objects under the Act.”<sup>127</sup> They allege his designations are too generic.<sup>128</sup> For example, “items are listed as categories, such as ‘broad desert mesas,’ rather than as specific objects, such as ‘Dance Hall Rock.’”<sup>129</sup> They allege that only nine items<sup>130</sup> “qualif[y] for monument designation under the Act.”<sup>131</sup> And while their first two claims for relief are “lack of statutory authority under Antiquities Act,” their amended complaint does not contain allegations that President Biden lacked the authority to designate federal land as the BENM and the GSENM.

Plaintiffs cannot rely on the ultra vires exception.

The Memoranda are not “final agency action” reviewable under the APA

On December 16, 2021, the director of the BLM issued Memoranda to the Utah State Director for the BLM.<sup>132</sup> One addressed the BENM Proclamation No. 10,285<sup>133</sup> and the other, the GSENM Proclamation No. 10,286.<sup>134</sup> The subject of each was “Interim Management of the [National Monument].”<sup>135</sup> The Memoranda claim to “(a) provide[] interim guidance for managing the monument while the agency develops a monument management plan; and (b)

Plaintiffs allege that the Memoranda should be reviewed because they are considered “final agency action” under § 706(2) of the APA.<sup>137</sup>

As stated supra, “[a] person suffering legal wrong because of agency action, or adversely affected or aggrieved by agency action within the meaning of a relevant statute, is entitled to judicial review thereof.”<sup>138</sup> “[T]he person claiming a right to sue must identify some ‘agency action’ that affects him in the specified fashion.”<sup>139</sup> “Agency action” “ha[s] the meaning[] given [it] by [5 U.S.C. §551].”<sup>140</sup> “[A]gency action’ includes the whole or a part of an agency rule, order, license, sanction, relief, or the equivalent or denial thereof, or failure to act.”<sup>141</sup> “[A]ction...is meant to cover comprehensively every manner in which an agency may exercise its power.”<sup>142</sup>

Agency action must be by statute or final agency action.<sup>143</sup> “[F]inal agency action for which there is no other adequate remedy in a court are subject to judicial review.”<sup>144</sup> “Final agency action” is not defined in the US Code.

The Memoranda do not meet the three requirements for “final agency action”

To determine if agency action is final depends on (1) whether its impact on a plaintiff is “direct and immediate”<sup>145</sup>; (2) whether the action “mark[s] the consummation of the agency’s decisionmaking (sic) process”<sup>146</sup>; and (3) whether the action is “one by which rights or obligations have been determined, or from which legal consequences will flow.”<sup>147</sup> The Memoranda—almost identical to one another in text—(1) do not have a direct and immediate impact on Plaintiffs; (2) are not the end of the BLM’s decision making process; and (3) do not establish rights, obligations, nor legal consequences.

(1) The Memoranda do not have a direct and immediate impact on Plaintiffs

In order to have a direct and immediate impact on a plaintiff, an agency action must “purport to give an authoritative interpretation of a statutory provision that has a direct effect on the day-to-day business of all [plaintiffs].”<sup>148</sup> An example is given in Abbott Laboratories v. Gardner. The Commissioner of Food and Drugs published a regulation<sup>149</sup> that, “effective immediately upon publication,”<sup>150</sup> required “labels, advertisements, and other printed matter relating to prescription drugs to designate the established name of the particular drug involved every time its trade name [was] used anywhere in such material.”<sup>151</sup> This necessitated “destroy[ing] stocks of printed matter” and “invest[ing] heavily in new printing type and new supplies.”<sup>152</sup> If plaintiffs—“a group of 37 individual drug manufacturers and...the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association”<sup>153</sup>—chose not to comply, they “would risk serious criminal and civil penalties for the unlawful distribution of ‘misbranded’ drugs.”<sup>154</sup> That consequence was direct and immediate impact.

The Memoranda do not have a direct and immediate impact on Plaintiffs. Plaintiffs assert that the Memoranda “restrain [their] use of the land, cut off potential revenue, and impede other projects.”<sup>155</sup> And that “[they] have been subjected to new rules, regulations, restrictions, and standards imposed and caused by both interim management plans.”<sup>156</sup> However, the contents of the Memoranda do not support these allegations.

The Memoranda are directed to the BLM’s Utah State Director<sup>157</sup> (“BLM-UT”), and the BLM-UT is the only person given directives in the Memoranda.<sup>158</sup> The Memoranda only mention State and local governments and citizens for consultation purposes. The Memoranda “direct[] the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Agriculture” to “coordinat[e] with State and local governments” “in the development of the monument management plan.”<sup>159</sup> They advise that “[t]he planning process should...provide for maximum public involvement, including consultation with State and local governments, community members, and other interested stakeholders.”<sup>160</sup> And the Proclamations require the monument advisory committees “to include representatives from ‘State and local governments, Tribal Nations, recreational users, conservation organizations, educators, local business owners, private landowners, and the scientific community.”<sup>161</sup> No action of any Plaintiff is compelled by the Memoranda. There are no immediate deadlines for Plaintiffs in the Memoranda; only the deadlines for a BLM planning process: “within one year”<sup>162</sup>; 6 months<sup>163</sup>; within 45 days<sup>164</sup>; and “expeditiously (by January 31, 2022).”<sup>165</sup> Nothing in the Memoranda’s language directly or immediately impacts Plaintiffs.

(2) The Memoranda are not a consummation of the BLM’s decision making process

Plaintiffs’ claim that the Memoranda are the “consummation of BLM’s decisionmaking (sic) process.”<sup>166</sup> Plaintiffs do not cite to any text in the Memoranda for support.<sup>167</sup> A “decision [that is] effectively the last word of the agency” constitutes “final agency action.”<sup>168</sup> “[I]t must not be of a merely tentative or interlocutory nature.”<sup>169</sup> In U.S. Army Corps of Engineers v. Hawkes Co., Inc., the Supreme Court held that a pre-permit, “approved jurisdictional decision” constituted “final agency action” because it was “issued after extensive factfinding by the Corps” and was “typically not revisited if the permitting process move[d] forward.”<sup>170</sup>

Conversely, these Memoranda are only preliminary, internally directive, informative, and suggestive. The phrase “interim guidance” is mentioned at the very beginning and throughout.<sup>171</sup> The Memoranda “provide[] specific direction to ensure that, until the new [joint management] plan is prepared, the BLM will manage the [National Monuments] in a manner consistent with [the Proclamations].”<sup>172</sup> The Memoranda do not give new information. They simply inform BLM-UT how they should comply with the Proclamations until the 2024 management plan is created.

The Memoranda reference the actions directed in the Proclamations and the monument management plans (forthcoming before March 1, 2024<sup>173</sup>) as the source of any direction.<sup>174</sup> The Memoranda themselves do not give any requirements. They are simply a connector between the Proclamations and future monument management plans.

The Memoranda also reference other documents as controlling (the BLM Manual,<sup>175</sup> CFRs,<sup>176</sup> and the Omnibus Act<sup>177</sup>). But, again, the Memoranda do not give any order or compel any action.

The Memoranda contain language that suggests more guidance could come:

More specific guidance regarding particular types of uses and activities follows.
Note, however, that this guidance is not intended to be comprehensive; additional,

Nothing in the Memoranda suggest that they are anything more than informative dicta and internal agency direction.

(3) The Memoranda do not “generate legal consequences”

Plaintiffs allege that the Memoranda “generate legal consequences”<sup>179</sup> and “determine rights or obligations.”<sup>180</sup> Final agency action must have “direct and appreciable legal consequences.”<sup>181</sup> Agency action that binds multiple agencies and prohibits them from bringing a lawsuit against a property owner for five years has legal consequences.<sup>182</sup> Or a document may be agency action if it “warns...of incurring criminal penalties;” “issue[s] a cease and desist order” that is “enforceable by the courts;” or “revo[kes] [a] certificate or permit.”<sup>183</sup> Agency action that “carries no direct consequences” and “serves more like a tentative recommendation than a final and binding determination” is not final.<sup>184</sup> The Memoranda are “purely advisory.”<sup>185</sup>

Plaintiffs allege legal consequences based on the statement in the Memoranda: “no new mining claims may be located, and no new mineral leases may be issued.”<sup>186</sup> This is incorrect. They frequently cite to or quote the Proclamations. They do not create anything new that was not already created by the Proclamations. The Memoranda do not impose legal consequences, nor do they declare rights or obligations.

The Biden Proclamations are the source of BLM’s obligations, and the Memoranda merely summarize the effects. They are not “final agency action” and therefore are not reviewable under the APA.

Individual Plaintiffs do not have standing to bring the claim for denial of permits

Individual Plaintiffs allege “[they] have been harmed when they have had federal permits denied as a result of President Biden’s proclamations and their implementing regulations.”<sup>188</sup> Individual Plaintiffs claim that “[a] permit denial is “final agency action.”<sup>189</sup> “Plaintiffs have the burden of identifying specific federal conduct and explaining how it is ‘final agency action’ within the meaning of section 551(13).”<sup>190</sup> The first requirement of 5 U.S.C. § 702 is “the person claiming a right to sue must identify some ‘agency action’ that affects him in the specified fashion.”<sup>191</sup> “The burden is on the party seeking review under § 702 to set forth specific facts...showing that he has satisfied its terms.”<sup>192</sup>

Individual Plaintiffs do not specify in their “claims for relief” what specific permit was denied; which agency denied it; or specifically when it was denied.<sup>193</sup> Individual Plaintiffs did state in the body of the Amended Complaint that BLM Defendant “denied the [Utah/Arizona ATV] Club’s request” “for a special recreation permit to host part of its Jamboree on Inchworm Arch Road.”<sup>194</sup> Individual Plaintiffs allege that the Utah/Arizona ATV Club (“the Club”) was granted a permit for this event in 2020 and 2021 by BLM.<sup>195</sup> And in 2022, “[t]he only intervening change was that President Biden had issued his proclamations, and BLM had issued its interim management plan<sup>196</sup> implementing them.”<sup>197</sup>

Even if the specific statement in the body of the amended complaint is sufficient, the Club does not have standing to bring this claim. The Club is “an outdoor off-highway vehicle recreation club” that “boasts a number of members from Utah” and is a member of BlueRibbon Coalition.<sup>198</sup>

The Club is not a party to this lawsuit. The Club is only a member of the BlueRibbon Coalition. BlueRibbon “is a 501(c)(3) non-profit that has worked to protect access to public lands...since 1987.”<sup>199</sup> It “is a membership-based organization, with thousands of members across every State in the country.”<sup>200</sup> “In Utah, BlueRibbon has...almost 30 members who are business or organizations.”<sup>201</sup>

[An] “entire ‘program’—consisting principally of the many individual actions referenced in the complaint, and presumably actions yet to be taken as well—cannot be laid before the courts for wholesale correction under the APA, simply because one of them that is ripe for review adversely affects one of the respondent’s members.”<sup>202</sup>

CONCLUSION

In spite of the sincere and deeply held view of the Plaintiffs, there is no relief for them in this action.

It has long been held that where Congress has authorized a public officer to take some specified legislative action when in his judgment that action is necessary or appropriate to carry out the policy of Congress, the judgment of the officer as to the existence of the facts calling for that action is not subject to review.<sup>203</sup>

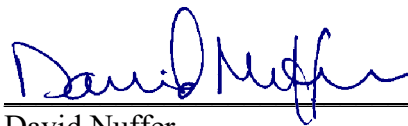

President Biden’s judgment in drafting and issuing the Proclamations as he sees fit is not an action reviewable by a district court.
