Tax Status
The Native American Rights Fund (NARF) is a nonprofit, charitable organization incorporated in 1971 under the laws of the District of Columbia. NARF is exempt from federal income tax under the provisions of Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code. Contributions to NARF are tax deductible. The Internal Revenue Service has ruled that NARF is not a "private foundation" as defined in Section 509(a) of the Internal Revenue Code.

Founded in 1970 and incorporated in 1971 in Washington, D.C.

Chairman's Message

The Native American Rights Fund was founded in 1970 and just observed its 18th anniversary. Since that time, NARF has proven to be a significant force in protecting the rights of Native Americans. Many of these rights are guaranteed in treaties negotiated by the United States with Indian tribes on a government-to-government basis.

During these past 18 years, NARF has provided expert legal representation for hundreds of tribes which has literally benefited thousands of Native Americans. NARF victories on behalf of Indian people, thus far, have provided tribes with increased land and water resources, the ability to continue traditional hunting and fishing rights, and the right to practice Native American religions. Some of NARF's past accomplishments include: helping the Alabama Coushatta Tribe of Texas and the Yaleta del Sur Pueblo of Texas restore their status as federally recognized tribes; and, helping the Oneida Tribe establish title to 250,000 acres of land in upstate New York.

Even though significant victories on behalf of Native Americans have been won, there remains much more work to be done for Indian rights. This year, NARF is involved in water rights cases for several western tribes, land claims for several eastern tribes, and rights of tribal self-government for Alaska Native villages. NARF is also involved in issues relating to Indian education, voting rights and Native American religious beliefs and practices. These rights of Native Americans must continue to be protected.

NARF will continue its fight for Native American tribes and individuals in asserting their rights. As it has in the past, NARF intends to play a major role in Indian rights in the coming years.

As chairman of NARF's Board of Directors, I am quite aware that the progress that Native Americans have made in the past would not be possible without your vital financial support. NARF gets results because it is a dedicated team of both Native Americans, non-natives and you. On behalf of the Board of Directors and staff, we thank everyone who has supported us in these past 18 years and hope you will continue to do so now and in the future.

Norman Ration
Chairman
Executive Director's Report

In 1988 the Native American Rights Fund continued to provide legal advice and representation to Indian tribes, organizations and individuals on issues of major significance to Indian people throughout the nation. The access to justice made possible by NARF's assistance resulted in several important legal victories in fiscal year 1988 for Native Americans.

In Twin City Construction Company v. Turtle Mountain Band of Chippewa Indians, NARF successfully represented the Band in upholding the jurisdiction of its tribal court to resolve a contract dispute arising on the reservation between a tribal member and a non-Indian. A federal appeals court reviewed the tribal court's determination of jurisdiction and upheld it from a challenge mounted by a non-Indian doing business on the Band's reservation in North Dakota.

In United States v. Bay Mills Chippewa Indian Community, NARF was successful in protecting the Community's tribal gaming operations from a federal effort to close them down under the Organized Crime Control Act of 1970. The Act makes it a federal crime to run a gambling operation in violation of state law, but NARF asserted that the State of Michigan had no jurisdiction to regulate tribal gaming. The federal district court dismissed the case on the grounds that the injunctive and declaratory relief sought by the United States was not proper under criminal statutes.

NARF represented the Alaska Native Coalition, an organization of Native villages, during passage of the "1991 Amendments" to the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act by Congress which were signed into law by the President in 1988. The amendments did extend the restrictions on alienation of Native corporate stock and did provide additional protections for Native lands held in Native corporate ownership, thus partially avoiding the potential of non-Native takeovers of Native corporations and lands that might have occurred after 1981 without such measures. Unfortunately, the amendments did not contain provisions facilitating the transfer of Native corporate lands back to tribal ownership which would have fully protected Native lands from involuntary transfer.

On behalf of five California tribes, NARF obtained passage of Congressional legislation which streamlines the process of securing federal approval of amendments to constitutions of tribal governments. The legislation grew out of a case previously won by NARF and California Indian Legal Services, Coyote Valley Band of Indians v. United States, which limited the ability of the Secretary of the Interior to indefinitely delay consideration of tribal constitutional amendments sought by tribes.

Through special grant funds, NARF began working in the economic development field for the first time through its Indian Economic Development Law Project. The goal of this effort is to help improve tribal economies through the use of tribal sovereign powers and tribal natural resources.

Negotiations were completed by NARF in 1988 on behalf of the Shoshone-Bannock Tribes over 12 lots of lands within the City of Pocatello, Idaho. The lots in question were never validly sold under an 1888 Act and were reclaimed by the Tribes in United States v. Colanni. A final settlement totaling $55,000 for all the lots was reached.

In South Dakota, NARF represented Sisseton-Wahpeton Sioux parents in successfully challenging an at-large school district election procedure which prevented Indian representation on the local school board in violation of the Voting Rights Act. A settlement was reached with the school district in Buckanaga v. Sisseton School District that provided for a new cumulative voting procedure. This system gives Indians, who comprise a large part of the school district, a better opportunity to elect candidates of their choice to the school board.

In another voting rights case, NARF filed Love v. Lumberton County Board of Education on behalf of several Lumbee Indians in North Carolina to challenge the gerrymandering of school district lines to avoid Indian or black majorities. The case spurred a successful referendum vote which consolidated the school districts and changed the at-large election procedure to single member voting districts, thereby facilitating increased opportunity for Indian representation on the school board.

These and other significant developments in 1988 show that the American system of justice can work for Native Americans if they are given access. In hundreds of cases since 1970, NARF has provided this access to justice and made the legal process work for the benefit of Indian people who may otherwise have gone unrepresented. We thank all of you who have supported our work and hope that you will continue your assistance of our efforts.

The Native American Rights Fund is a national legal defense fund for this country’s American Indians. Now entering its 18th year, NARF has represented Indian clients in nearly every state in the nation. The hundreds of cases it has been involved in have concerned every area and issue in the field of Indian law. Over the years, NARF has gained the mark of a proven advocate in Indian law issues which will affect this and future generations of Native Americans.

The Founding of NARF

Many federally-funded legal services programs were established around the country in the 1960s. These programs were aimed at providing legal representation for poor and disadvantaged people. It was through these legal services programs that the special needs of Indian people became apparent. The hundreds of treaties, thousands of federal statutes and numerous regulations and administrative rulings have created a unique body of law called Indian law which governs the lives of Indian people.

Indian legal services programs could not assist Indians everywhere, so the need for a national program to provide these services also became apparent. The Native American Rights Fund emerged in California in 1970 to fill this need. NARF was relocated to Boulder, Colorado, a more central location to Indian country, in 1971. Since the beginning, the national scope of legal work undertaken by NARF as a nonprofit organization has been supported by foundation and government grants, corporate, individual, and tribal contributions and limited client fees.

The accomplishments and growth of NARF over the years confirmed the great need for Indian legal representation on a national basis. This legal advocacy on behalf of Native Americans is as crucial now as ever. NARF strives to protect the most important rights of Indian people within the limit of available resources. To achieve this goal, NARF’s Board of Directors has defined five priority areas for NARF’s work. These five priority areas are: (1) the preservation of tribal existence; (2) the protection of tribal natural resources; (3) the promotion of human rights; (4) the accountability of governments to Native Americans; and (5) the development of Indian law.

General Staff
“Now, finally, hundreds of individuals can exercise their rights to fish without fear of losing their homes and fishing boats to the Internal Revenue Service for failure to pay taxes they don’t owe.”

John Echobawk on the signing of Tax Reform Act that provided and reaffirmed Native fishermen the right to exercise treaty fishing rights without being subject to state or federal income taxes.
The Preservation of Tribal Existence

The most critical issue facing Indian tribes today is the preservation of their existence as governmental entities with all the power and authority that governmental status entails. Thus, the focus of NARF's work involves issues relating to the preservation and enforcement of the status of tribes as sovereign, self-governing bodies. For some tribes, the issues are very basic — persuading the federal government to recognize their status as tribes or, in some cases, convincing Congress to reverse the termination of their tribal status and restore them as tribes. Most recently, NARF has begun working in the area of Indian economic development in appreciation of the fact that the future of tribal existence is closely tied to the development of tribal economies.

Tribal Sovereignty

Tribes possess the power to regulate the internal affairs of their members and the activities within their reservations since they are sovereign governments. Conflicts often arise with states, the federal government, and others over these powers. During the year, NARF handled several major cases that affected the sovereign powers of tribes. These cases involved issues of taxation, jurisdiction, and tribal government.

Federal Indian law exempts tribal property and assets from state and federal taxation. Several states have taxed or tried to implement taxes on Indian trust property and assets. In the past several years, NARF has successfully worked on tax cases that have reaffirmed and strengthened the tax immunity of tribal governments and tribal members.

NARF is assisting the Kluti Kaah Native Village of Copper Center in Alaska in its effort to collect tribal taxes. NARF helped the Village develop and implement its tribal tax ordinances in order to create additional revenue for needed governmental services. NARF also represents the Nome Eskimo Community in its appeal to the Alaska Supreme Court which concerns the validity of a city tax on the tribal headquarters and other property of the Nome Eskimo Community.

Unfortunately, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals upheld an earlier ruling that prohibits the Native Village of Venetie from enforcing a business activity tax on its land. In State of Alaska v. Native Village of Venetie, the Court found that the ruling was appropriate pending resolution of the Village's status as a tribal entity. The court sent the case back to the district level to make a determination of the village's status.

In Michigan, in Tcheylo v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue Service and Tcheylo v. United States, NARF is challenging the federal government's authority to tax the fishing income of Bay Mills Chippewa fishermen who are exercising their Indian treaty fishing rights. To help resolve the issue, legislation was introduced in Congress to exempt the revenue derived from treaty fishing. On September 23, 1988, Congress passed the legislation to exempt treaty fishing income from taxation. The President is expected to sign the bill. When he does, treaty fishermen can exercise their treaty right to fish free of any federal or state taxation. Also, pending litigation will be resolved by this legislation.

NARF is also representing the Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of Nevada in litigation involving the Tribe's taxation ordinance in Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe v. Burchett. In addition, NARF is also assisting the Tribe in further developing and amending its tax ordinance.

On behalf of the Council of Energy Resource Tribes and the Shoshone-Bannock Tribes, NARF filed an amicus curiae brief in a case with the U.S. Supreme Court. In Cotton Petroleum v. New Mexico, the Court will examine whether the existence of tribal severance taxes precludes state taxation of an energy company doing business on the Jicarilla Apache Reservation in New Mexico.

NARF successfully represented the Turtle Mountain Chippewa Tribe in its jurisdiction case concerning non-tribal members. In Twin City Construction Company v. Turtle Mountain Band of Chippewa Indians, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 8th Circuit upheld a decision of the Turtle Mountain Chippewa Court of Appeals that Tribal Courts have jurisdiction over a suit by a tribal member against a non-Indian doing business on the Turtle Mountain Reservation in North Dakota. This case establishes tribal members' rights to use a Tribal Court system to resolve disputes with non-members. It is the first case where federal courts have reviewed entire records developed by tribal courts on their jurisdiction.

In U.S. v. Bay Mills Chippewa Indian Community, NARF is defending the Community's tribal gaming operations against a challenge by the United States under the Organized Crime Control Act of 1970. The Act makes it a federal crime to run a gambling operation in violation of state law, but NARF asserts that the State of Michigan has no jurisdiction to regulate tribal gaming. In August, 1988, the Federal District Court for Western District of Michigan held that the injunctive and declaratory relief sought by the United States was not appropriate under criminal statutes and dismissed the case. The United States has appealed to the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals.

NARF filed an amicus curiae brief with the U.S. Supreme Court in a tribal zoning ordinance case. In Yakima Nation v. Whiteside, the Court will review an appeals court decision that held the Tribe has exclusive zoning jurisdiction over non-member fee land on the Yakima Reservation in Washington. The case raises a number of important issues facing Indian tribes, including the effect of the allotment acts of the late 1800s on tribal jurisdiction over lands allotted under those acts, and whether a State can oust tribal jurisdiction over those lands.

On February 3, 1988, President Reagan signed into law the "1991 Amendments" to the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (ANCSA). NARF assisted the Alaska Native Coalition (ANC) in a major effort to amend the ANCSA.

Unless new legislation were passed, Native ownership of land and stock were in jeopardy of being taken over by non-Native interests in the year 1991. Through ANCSA in 1971, Alaska Native tribes received 44 million acres of land that was placed in corporations with the stock held by individual Natives who were alive on December 18, 1971. Sale of stock was prohibited for 20 years, during which time all undeveloped land was also immune from taxation. After the 20-year period, Native stock could be sold on open market and many feared that non-Native corporations of interest would take over the native corporations. It was also certain that Native land would be lost through taxation or other means.

The new amendments extend the restrictions on the sale of Native stock for an indefinite period of time, but authorize individual corporations to lift the restrictions at their option. The legislation provides automatic "land bank" protections to land owned by a Native corporation so long as the land is not developed, leased or sold to third parties. However, these land protections do not cover developed lands and do not provide the level of protection given to tribal trust lands in the lower 48. ANCSA and NARF fought for authority to transfer lands from the corporations to tribes where they would have iron-clad protection from any form of involuntary loss. Unfortunately, the Alaska Congressional delegation would not allow that section of the bill to pass unless the tribes agreed to provisions severely restricting their sovereignty, which they refused to do.

In an Alaska Native sovereignty case, NARF filed an amicus curiae brief in Native Village of Tyonek v. Puckett in support of a federal district court's ruling that Tyonek possess sovereign immunity and self-governing powers, unaffected by passage of ANCSA. A court ruling is expected soon.

NARF successfully assisted five California tribes in their effort to obtain Congressional legislation that provides amendments to the Indian Reorganization Act of 1934 to establish procedures and time deadlines in the Secretary of the Interior's review of tribal constitutions and bylaws. The legislation grew out of a case previously won by NARF and California Indian Legal Services, Coyote Valley Band of Indians v. United States, which limited the ability of the Secretary of the Interior to delay consideration of tribal constitutional amendments.

“Without belaboring the point, non-Indians have removed and carried away untold thousands of dead Indian bodies and literally hundreds of thousands of associated burial goods from Native graves. This widespread removal and retention of dead Indian bodies and grave goods is one of the most grisly and frightening problems confronting Indian people today.”

NAI Legal Advisory
The Protection of Tribal Natural Resources

The protection of tribal natural resources is closely linked to the preservation of tribal existence. Without a sufficient natural resource base to sustain it, tribal existence is difficult to maintain. In this area, NARF helps Indian people establish and maintain ownership and control of land, water rights, and hunting and fishing rights.

Protection of Indian Lands

NARF is helping the Swinomish Tribe prepare for trial in a land rights case in the State of Washington. In Swinomish Tribal Community v. Burlington Northern, Inc., the Community is seeking to regain tidelands and other submerged lands adjoining the uplands on its Reservation. To date, NARF has negotiated settlements with most of the defendants in the suit that recognize the Community's title. NARF is also assisting the San Juan Paiutes in Arizona in asserting title to a land base and the Pamunkey Tribe in defining its reservation boundaries in Virginia.

In Walker River Paiute Tribe v. Southern Pacific, NARF is conducting negotiations on behalf of the Tribe with Southern Pacific Railway to collect trespass damages for use of the railroad on their reservation in Nevada without tribal consent and to negotiate the future of the railroad on the reservation. In United States v. Colianni, NARF successfully assisted the Shoshone-Bannock Tribe in their claim to 12 lots of land within the City of Pocatello, Idaho. The Tribe received $55,000 as a result of the settlement with the occupants. The lots in question were never validly sold under an 1888 Act.

NARF successfully assisted the St. Croix Band of Chippewa Indians of Wisconsin place land in trust for the purpose of conducting a tribal bingo enterprise. The action occurred after NARF challenged the Secretary of the Interior's refusal to place certain off-reservation tribal lands in federal trust status for the Tribe. The Tribe claimed that the refusal was unlawful because it relied on a rule illegally adopted in violation of the Administrative Procedure Act. A federal court ordered the Department of Interior to review the Tribe's petition under its previous policy and without any recourse to the illegal rule. After the land was placed in trust status, the Department of the Interior declared the subject land a reservation pursuant to the Indian Reorganization Act of 1934.

In Metropolitan Water District v. United States, the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals held that a water district's challenge to federal determinations of the boundaries of three Indian reservations along the Colorado River was barred by the federal government's immunity from suit. NARF filed an amicus curiae brief in the U.S. Supreme Court on behalf of several tribes urging the Court to uphold the 9th Circuit's decision after it accepted the case for review. The location of boundaries is a crucial step in quantification of the water rights due the Tribes under Arizona v. California.

In Cheyenne-Arapaho Tribe v. United States, NARF is representing the Tribe in its suit to stop the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) from renegotiating tribal oil and gas leases without tribal consent. The BIA has been renegotiating oil and gas leases at below market value and the Tribe wants the right to negotiate its own leases at fair competitive rates.

NARF is also assisting the Pottawatomi in Canada, whose ancestors fled the United States in the early 1900s to escape removal, in their claim against the federal government for breach of treaty obligations. The band is seeking annuities from the federal government which in the past has been rejected before the Indian Claims Commission on the basis that they are not Indians residing within the United States. NARF is seeking other alternative ways to help the Tribe recover the annuities owed.

Eastern Land Claims

NARF began representing many Eastern tribes in their land claims during the 1970s. Most of these cases are based on the Indian Non-Intercourse Act of 1790 prohibiting the transfer of Indian land without federal consent which is lacking in each of the cases.

In South Carolina v. Catawba Indian Tribe, NARF represents the Tribe in determining the impact of a ruling that holds that the Tribe’s claim to 144,000 acres of land is subject to the State’s statute of limitations. NARF is also assisting the Schagticoke Tribe of Connecticut and the Stockbridge-Munsee Tribe of Wisconsin in settlement negotiations on their land claims and is appealing an adverse decision for the Alabama-Coushatta Tribe of Texas on their land claim.

Water Rights

Since most Indian tribes are located in the western states where water is scarce, water rights are of central importance to many tribes whose reservation economies and futures are dependent upon access to water. Nearly all the western tribes are involved in either litigation or negotiations to establish their reserved water rights which guarantee water for both present and future uses with priority over most non-Indian uses.

In Fort McDowell Indian Community v. Salt River Project, NARF is preparing the Fort McDowell Mohave-Apaches’ claim to additional water from the Verde River in Arizona and has assisted the Tribe in extensive negotiations with the State, the federal government and non-Indian water users.

In 1986, NARF successfully helped the Muckleshoot Tribe of Washington restore its White River fishery in the State of Washington. In Muckleshoot Tribe v. Puget Sound Power and Light Company, the power company agreed to construct a large fish hatchery on the White River. NARF is now assisting the Tribe with its intervention in the power company’s licensing proceeding before the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. The intervention is necessary to protect the Tribe’s water and fishing interests.

NARF is helping the Northern Cheyenne Tribe in their negotiations with the Montana Reserved Water Rights Compact Commission to settle their water claims. A proposed compact for the Northern Cheyenne Tribe has been sent to the Commission and negotiations will begin in January, 1989. NARF is assisting the Nez Perce Tribe of Idaho in negotiations with the State of Idaho to quantify and establish their water rights in the Snake River Basin adjudication and is also assisting the Klamath Tribe of Oregon quantify their water rights in the Klamath River Basin in Oregon. NARF is also researching the Chippewa-Cree Tribe’s water claim in the Missouri River Basin in Montana.

Hunting and Fishing

For both subsistence and commercial purposes, the right to hunt and fish in traditional areas both on and off reservations remains a vital issue in Indian country. NARF has long been instrumental in assisting tribes to establish their hunting and fishing rights that are guaranteed by treaty or other federal law.
NARF is assisting the Bay Mills Chippewa Indian Community in implementing its settlement agreement of approximately $5 million that includes a tribal trust fund and the development of tribal conservation programs. The settlement was previously reached following a decision in U.S. v. Michigan, where the courts affirmed the Tribe's treaty right to fish under tribal regulations and to have exclusive access to fish in certain parts of the Great Lakes.

In Katie John v. State of Alaska, NARF continues to assert subsistence fishing rights for Alaskan Native subsistence users. Last year, for the first time since 1964, members of the Alaska Native Villages of Mentasta and Dot Lake were allowed to legally fish for subsistence purposes at their traditional fishing site. Further litigation is underway to remove remaining restrictions of subsistence fishing by Alaska Natives.

"It may be hard for us to understand why these Indians cling so tenaciously to their lands and traditional tribal way of life. The record does not leave the impression that the lands of their reservation are the most fertile, the landscape the most beautiful or their homes the most splendid specimens of architecture. But this is their home — their ancestral home. There, they, their children, and their forebears were born. They, too, have their memories and their loves. Some things are worth more than money."

Justice Hugo Black

U.S. Supreme Court
"Today's ruling sacrifices a religion at least as old as the Nation itself, along with the spiritual well-being of its approximately 5,000 adherents, so that the Forest Service can build a six-mile segment of road that the lower courts found had only the most marginal and speculative utility, both to the government itself and to the private lumber interest that might conceivably use it."

Dissent Opinion written by Justice William J. Brennan in Lyng v. Northwest Indian Cemetery Protection Association
During this reporting period NARF processed approximately 400 requests from Tribes, individuals and organizations.
The Promotion of Human Rights

In addressing human rights, NARF seeks to enforce laws which are designed to address the unique needs and problems of Native Americans in this area. In 1988, NARF provided assistance in problems involving religious freedom, voting rights, education and Indian child welfare.

Religious Freedom

The protection of traditional Native American religions is synonymous with the preservation of traditional cultures of those peoples. Indian religions are entitled to the same First Amendment protection as other religions. This includes access to and protection of sacred objects and sites and the freedom to practice traditional religious ceremonies.

This year, the U.S. Supreme Court made adverse rulings in two religious freedom cases that NARF filed amicus curiae briefs on in behalf of tribes and organizations. In the first case, Lyng v. Northwest Indian Cemetery, the Court ruled that the Forest Service could complete a road project in a section of land regarded as sacred by Yurok, Karok and Talowa Indians. In a 5-3 decision, the Court overturned a lower court ruling that held the project violated the Indians' religious freedom guarantee under the First Amendment. Legislative remedies to protect this sacred site and others are now under consideration.

In the second case, the Court sent back a peyote case to the Oregon Supreme Court to determine if the use of peyote in religious ceremonies is legal in Oregon. In Employment Division, Department of Human Services of the State of Oregon v. Smith, the Court examined the refusal of the State of Oregon to pay unemployment benefits to members of the Native American Church who were fired from their jobs for peyote use during religious ceremonies. The Oregon Supreme Court held that the denial of unemployment benefits violated the Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment.

In Dedman v. Hawaii Board of Land and Natural Resources, the U.S. Supreme Court denied the appeal of Native Hawaiians to stop the development of a geothermal project on the island of Hawaii. The Natives allege the volcano is a sacred religious site and that its proposed development would infringe on their religious beliefs and practices. NARF serves as co-counsel with the Native Hawaiian Legal Corporation and private attorneys.

Protecting Indian burial sites from excavation and desecration has been the objective of NARF's advocacy for a new federal Indian burial policy. The policy would provide for the reinterment of over 300,000 Indian bodies stored in federal and state institutions, and would also establish a new federal policy properly recognizing the cultural and religious rites of Native Americans relating to burial sites on public lands.

On a state level, NARF is assisting the State of Kansas draft legislation to stop the desecration of Indian burial grounds there. In the State of Nebraska, NARF is assisting the Pawnee Tribe of Oklahoma recover the remains of its ancestors and burial goods stored in state museums.

Voting Rights

In 1982, Congress amended Section 2 of the 1965 Voting Rights Act to prohibit discriminatory electoral practices and procedures. However, various election methods are still in place that prevent Indian people from fully participating in various city, county and state elections. Currently, NARF is working to end discriminatory voting practices in school board elections.

In South Dakota, NARF successfully challenged the issue of an at-large district voting procedure which prevented minority representation on a local school board. In Buckanaga v. Sisseton School District, NARF reached a settlement with the school district that provided for a cumulative voting scheme. The system would give Indians a better opportunity to elect candidates of their choice to the local school board and comply with the Voting Rights Act. The settlement ends a four-year-old struggle by Indian parents to establish a fair election procedure.

On behalf of several Lumbee tribal members, NARF conducted an extensive investigation of Robeson County, North Carolina, to determine if the County had been gerrymandered to avoid predominantly Indian or Black school districts. The case, Love, et. al. v. Lumberton County Board of Education, et. al., was stayed by the Court pending a referendum vote that would consolidate the school districts and change it from an at-large system to a single-member voting district. The vote passed in March 1988, however, the lawsuit served as an impetus to get Indian citizens out to vote for the merger. Under Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act, the School Boards are required to submit the selection change to the U.S. Department of Justice for approval. NARF submitted comments on the election change to the Department of Justice.

Education

Education is especially important for Native Americans since it is essential for developing the skills necessary for tribal self-sufficiency. NARF has worked successfully with tribes, parent groups, and national Indian organizations to assure that Native Americans have an active and participatory voice in deciding the educational future of their children.

NARF is assisting the Rosebud Sioux Tribe of South Dakota in developing an education code that addresses several issues the Tribe has identified regarding education in the primary and secondary schools on the Rosebud Sioux Reservation.

On behalf of the Hoopa Tribe of California, NARF commented on proposed rules regarding the Bureau of Indian Affairs' higher educational grant and loan program. The BIA higher education grant program is authorized by the Snyder Act which provides the authority for most BIA programs. The objective of the program under the proposed rules is "to provide financial aid to eligible Indian students to obtain an undergraduate degree or certificate from an accredited institution of higher learning."

Indian Child Welfare

The Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) is a federal law enacted in 1978 which is intended to promote the stability of Indian tribes and families by establishing minimum federal standards for the removal of Indian children from their families and the placement of Indian children in adoption or foster homes.

NARF and the Native American Program Oregon Legal Services (NAPOLS) filed an amicus curiae brief with the U.S. Supreme Court in an ICWA case. In Mississippi Band of Choctaw Indians v. Holyfield, the Court will review whether the Mississippi Choctaw Tribal Court has exclusive jurisdiction over the adoption of Indian children who were born off the Choctaw reservation although their parents lived on the reservation.
"The white man does not understand America; he is too far removed from its formative processes. The man from Europe is still a foreigner and an alien. And he still hates the man who questioned his path across the continent. But in the Indian the spirit of the land is still vested; it will be until other men are able to divine and meet its rhythm. Men must be born and reborn to belong. Their bodies must be formed of the dust of their forefathers' bones."

The Accountability of Governments

NARF works to hold all levels of government accountable for the proper enforcement of the many laws and regulations which govern the lives of Indian people. NARF continues to be involved in several cases which focus primarily on the accountability of the federal and state governments to Indians.

In Alaska, NARF has pending a suit on behalf of the Native Village of Akiachak and others to secure state revenue sharing funds for their tribal government. In Native Village of Akiachak v. Notti, NARF is challenging Alaska’s position that the state cannot constitutionally allocate revenue sharing monies to tribal governments. NARF is asserting that the villages are governments with the same status as lower 48 Indian tribes and therefore they may be singled out for discrete beneficial treatment without running afoul of equal protection of the law guarantees. NARF is also assisting the Akiachak Native Community in its effort to dissolve its state-chartered municipality in order that its federally-recognized tribal government will remain the paramount governing body in the community. This year, legislation successfully passed the Alaska Legislature allowing communities to dissolve state-chartered municipalities in favor of tribal governments. The City government of Akiachak will soon be dissolved.

In Kauley v. Clark, NARF and Oklahoma Indian Legal Services represent individual allottees in their effort to enforce the Federal Oil and Gas Royalty Management Act (FOGMA) of 1983. FOGMA expressly vests in the Secretary of Interior the responsibility of administering federal and Indian oil and gas resources leased to private developers. The allottees allege that the federal government has been negligent in administering the Act.

NARF is also assisting the Rosebud Sioux Tribe of South Dakota negotiate payment of its outstanding Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) debt. So far, the debt has been reduced by two-thirds.
The Development of Indian Law

The systematic development of Indian law is essential for the continued protection of Indian rights. This process involves distributing Indian law materials to, and communicating with, those groups and individuals working on behalf of Indian people. NARF has two ongoing projects which are aimed at achieving this goal.

Indian Law Support Center

The first of these projects is the Indian Law Support Center (ILSC), which is one of 16 national support centers funded by the Legal Services Corporation. NARF has operated the ILSC since 1972, providing backup legal assistance to local legal services programs which serve Indians on reservations and in urban areas nationwide.

During the fiscal year 1988, the ILSC provided assistance to local programs in all areas of Indian law. In responding to hundreds of requests, the Center’s services have included letter and telephone advice, furnishing legal materials, counseling in cases, conducting legal research, reviewing drafts of court pleadings and briefs, analyzing legislation, and providing other services as requested by legal services field programs. The Center conducted a national training event on Federal Indian Law focused on the areas of jurisdiction and sovereignty, Indian entitlements, domestic relations, natural resources, and Indian civil rights in 1988. The publication of a monthly newsletter distributed to Indian law practitioners is another service performed by the Center.

The ILSC continues to assist directly in the litigation involving Klamath tribal water rights, enforcement of federal oil and gas laws and the federal trust responsibility for members of Oklahoma tribes, the rights of Native prisoners in Idaho, California and Alaska, and the protection of First Amendment religious rights of Native Americans and Hawaiian Natives. Additionally, the ILSC has written and widely distributed six manuals on major areas of Indian law. The manuals include: A Manual on Tribal Regulatory Systems, A Self-Help Manual for Indian Economic Development, A Handbook of Federal Indian Education Laws, A Manual for Protecting Indian Natural Resources, A Manual on the Indian Child Welfare Act and Laws Affecting Indian Juveniles, and a manual on Prison Law and the Rights of Native American Prisoners. Updates to three of these manuals are also available.

National Indian Law Library

Beginning its 15th year of existence is the National Indian Law Library (NILL), a NARF special project in the development of Indian law. The library serves as a clearinghouse and invaluable resource for Indian legal materials. During the 1988 fiscal year, the library staff processed over 4,673 requests for information from throughout the United States and many foreign countries. As a national resource center for Indian legal materials, access to NILL’s holdings is essential for anyone working in the field of Indian law. Thus, the main users of NILL have been NARF attorneys, private attorneys, legal services attorneys, tribal officials, tribal advocates, tribal court judges, law students and law libraries.

The National Indian Law Library Catalogue, An Index to Indian Legal Materials and Resources, reflects NILL’s current holdings which include cases, briefs, pleadings, orders, legal opinions, rulings, memoranda, treaties, studies, books, articles, reports and legislative histories pertinent to Indian law. The NILL Catalogue is arranged by subject, author, title, a table of cases and by NILL number, and with its supplements lends ready access to NILL’s extensive holdings. The NILL Catalogue, published every five years and updated annually by non-cumulative supplements, is available for purchase from the National Indian Law Library.

Other Activities

In addition to its major projects, NARF staff is actively involved in national Indian conferences and legal education projects. During the past fiscal year, NARF attorneys and staff served in a formal or informal leadership capacity at numerous tribal, state, academic, and national Indian meetings such as the National Congress of American Indians, Federal Bar Association and the National Indian Education Association.

NARF remains firmly committed to continuing its effort to share the legal expertise which NARF possesses with those groups and individuals working in support of Indian rights, and to foster the recognition of Indian rights in mainstream society.

On February 26, 1988, the U.S. Department of the Interior announced its official acceptance of Nevada’s offer to return, or retrocede, civil and criminal jurisdiction over Ely Indian Colony to the United States. The favorable decision means the Ely Colony Shoshone Tribe will now exercise exclusive jurisdiction over misdemeanor crimes committed by Indians on Ely Colony lands, as well as over all civil matters occurring thereon which affect the interests of the Tribe or its members.

NARF Legal Review
This year, Native American Rights Fund’s total fund balances grew by $188,852 to total $1,024,782 as of September 30, 1988. This growth reflects increased efforts to raise funds to support a new staffing level, NARF’s highest in over ten years, of eighteen attorneys.

Support and revenue totalled $4,376,221 in fiscal 1988, which is an increase of 19.5% over fiscal 1987 support and revenue. Revenue sources as a percentage of total support and revenue are shown below for both years.

Revenue dollars increased from government grants, contributions and other sources. A large bequest and recovery of fees in one of NARF’s cases were major elements in the increase of the “other” revenue category.

Revenue dollars decreased slightly from foundation grants, and decreased from fee income. None of the revenue source changes is seen as a trend which will affect NARF’s overall funding composition.

NARF’s expenditures increased in fiscal 1988 by 11.5% over fiscal 1987, to a total of $4,187,369. The increase reflects the gradual staffing climb from sixteen to eighteen attorneys during the year, as well as usual cost increases.

Expenditures for Program services and Support services as a percentage of total expenditures are given below for both fiscal 1988 and fiscal 1987.

To the Board of Directors of Native American Rights Fund, Inc.

In our opinion, the accompanying balance sheets and the related statements of support, revenue, expenses and changes in fund balances, of changes in cash and of functional expenses present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of Native American Rights Fund, Inc. at September 30, 1988 and 1987, and the results of its operations and changes in fund balances and changes in its cash for the years then ended in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles. These financial statements are the responsibility of the organization's management; our responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements based on our audits. We conducted our audits of these statements in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards which require that we plan and perform the audits to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements are free of material misstatement. An audit includes examining, on a test basis, evidence supporting the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements, assessing the accounting principles used and significant estimates made by management, and evaluating the overall financial statement presentation. We believe that our audits provide a reasonable basis for the opinion expressed above.

NOTES TO FINANCIAL STATEMENTS
SEPTEMBER 30, 1988

NOTE 1 — ORGANIZATION AND SUMMARY OF SIGNIFICANT ACCOUNTING POLICIES

Organization
Native American Rights Fund, Inc. (NARF) was incorporated in 1971 under the nonprofit corporation law of the District of Columbia and has a primary objective of providing legal representation, assistance and education to Native American people. NARF derives financial support from private foundations, the United States Government, public contributions and a limited fee policy.

NARF is a tax-exempt organization as described in section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code and, as such, is subject to federal income taxes only on unrelated business income.

Revenue recognition
A substantial portion of NARF's revenue is derived from restricted grants and contracts. Revenue from such restricted sources is deemed to be earned when NARF has incurred costs which satisfy restrictions imposed by the respective grants or contracts. Funds received from restricted sources in excess of costs incurred are reported as deferred revenues. For costs incurred in excess of funds received from restricted resources, revenue and related receivables are recognized to the extent of such costs unless, in management's opinion, future grant or contract funds will be insufficient. In such cases, costs are charged to unrestricted funds.

Contributions and donations from unrestricted sources are generally recognized when received. Donations of marketable securities or other in-kind contributions are recorded as revenue at their estimated fair market value at the date of contribution.

Interfund receivable (payable)
All funds received by NARF are deposited in a general bank account, and segregation of cash and certain other assets and liabilities between restricted and unrestricted funds is not maintained in the accounting records. Segregation of revenue and expenditures applicable to restricted, unrestricted (including segregation within the restricted fund by grant source) and the general fixed asset funds is maintained in the accounting records. The interfund receivable (payable) results from the excess of net assets specifically identifiable with the restricted fund over deferred revenue at September 30, 1988 and 1987.

Allocation of expenses
Expenses are allocated to grants based on time devoted to projects by attorneys, except where expenses are specifically identifiable with a particular grant or project.

Professional staff
Personnel classified as professional staff include attorneys, legislative assistant, librarians, interns and office management personnel.
Cash was provided by (used for):

Excess (deficiency) of support and revenue over expenses

Add (deduct) items not affecting cash:
- Deferred revenue and grants receivable recognized as support and revenue
- Bad debt expense
- Depreciation
- Loss on disposal of property and equipment
- Deferred revenue received and grants receivable collected
- (Increase) decrease in other receivables (net of accounts written off of $72,257 and $2,802, respectively)
- (Increase) decrease in prepaid expenses
- Increase (decrease) in accounts payable
- Increase (decrease) in other accrued expenses
- Cash provided by (used for) operations
- Proceeds from issuance of note payable

Cash was used for:
- Net fund balance transfers
- Acquisition of property and equipment
- Repayment of mortgage and notes payable
- Increase (decrease) in cash

The accompanying notes are an integral part of the financial statements.

NOTE 2 — MARKETABLE SECURITIES

Marketable securities consist of marketable corporate equity and debt securities and mutual fund investments. These investments are stated at cost of $345,071 and $221,393 which is lower than market of $357,878 and $255,268 at September 30, 1988 and 1987, respectively. Investment income was $25,980 and $12,404 for 1988 and 1987, respectively. Declines in market value from cost are recognized when the aggregate market value is less than the carrying amount. Recoveries of aggregate market amounts are recorded in the period realized subject to the limitation that the carrying amount does not exceed the original cost.

NOTE 3 — GRANTS RECEIVABLE AND DEFERRED REVENUE

Grants receivable and deferred revenue consisted of the following individual restricted grants or contracts at September 30, 1988 and 1987:

Poarch Band of Creek Indians, Alabama
"The central (Indian) issues have not changed much since the times of Francisco de Victoria, George Washington, Seneca, Andrew Jackson, John Marshall, Samuel Worcester, or Lone Wolf. Congress, the courts, the tribes, and the states still wrestle with questions relating to the nature of Indian property rights; the rights of individual Indians; and the powers of federal, tribal and state governments in Indian country. And it is a process that will continue."

The back over power of the eruption of Kilauea Volcano of the island of Hawaii. The volcano is the home of Pele, the Hawaiian goddess. NARF is helping a group of Native Hawaiians protect their spiritual beliefs and practices.
